

Growth of W.Va.'s parks

Annual attendance has been growing overall at public parks in West Virginia since the beginning of the Great Recession in 2007. This map shows the location of state and federal parks in the state that track attendance. All parks had an average increase in attendance over the past four fiscal years except the eight parks indicated.

Non-residents stay overnight

In FY2011-12, the majority of visitors at West Virginia's lodges and cabins were non-residents, while campers were largely state residents.
